Decisions

Make data exports self-service

Status

Owner

Decision date

Context & problem
Support currently prepares account exports manually. Customers need a repeatable way to retrieve their own records.

Selected solution
Offer CSV export from the account workspace.

Rationale
A focused self-service flow addresses a recurring request without introducing a reporting platform.

Alternatives
Keep support-assisted exports
Advantages: No implementation effort.
Trade-offs: Continued wait time and support effort.

Add self-service CSV export
Advantages: Customers can retrieve records directly.
Trade-offs: Requires access-control and failure handling.

Assumptions
The existing account model defines the accessible record scope.

Constraints
No changes to the authorization model in this release.

Stakeholders
Product, Engineering, Customer support

Story refinement

Export account records

Sources: d149221e-de7d-4a9f-9ea1-6b08873731b0

Original story
As an account administrator, I want to export my account records easily, so that I can prepare internal reports.

User story
As an account administrator, I want to export my account records easily, so that I can prepare internal reports.

User / persona
Account administrator

Need
Export the records available in my account workspace.

User value
Prepare internal reporting without waiting for support.

Acceptance criteria
Given an authenticated account administrator with accessible records, when they request a CSV export, then a CSV file containing those records is downloaded.

Open questions
“easily” is subjective and does not define an observable threshold. What observable condition would demonstrate “easily”? Agree on a measurable expectation.
No error condition is mentioned in the story or criteria. Which failure conditions are relevant here, and what feedback should the user receive?
The empty-data case is not described. What should happen when there are no data to export?

Business rules
Apply the existing account access permissions.

Constraints
CSV only for the first release.

Dependencies
Account overview and existing authorization rules.

“intuitive” is subjective and does not define an observable threshold. What observable condition would demonstrate “intuitive”? Agree on a measurable expectation.
No acceptance criteria are recorded. Given [confirmed context], when [the requested action occurs], then [an observable result]. Replace each placeholder with an agreed fact.
No error condition is mentioned in the story or criteria. Which failure conditions are relevant here, and what feedback should the user receive?
No business rules are recorded. They may be unnecessary; confirm with the team. Are there eligibility, permission, or data-handling rules to confirm?
